Eclipses

for Michelle Obama

Cast for 1 July 2026

A sample reading from Mike Astrology. This is the complete report a customer receives, generated by the same engine — nothing here was written for this page.

Birth data: 17 January 1964, 19:00, Chicago, Illinois, USA.

About the birth time: 19:00 is the time reported in public astrology databases, not a time taken from a birth certificate. Houses and the rising sign depend on the exact minute, so house-based sections should be read as the chart as commonly published rather than as settled fact.

This is an astrological reading, not reporting. It describes a chart. It is not a claim about what Michelle Obama is actually like, and she has no connection to Mike Astrology.

This reading is cast for a fixed date: 2026-07-01. A forecast describes a moment, so this one is a snapshot rather than something that stays current — your own would be cast for today.

It is not a prediction about this person's life. It describes what the sky is doing against a birth chart. Nothing here is a claim about what has happened or will happen to them.

An eclipse is a New or Full Moon that happens close to one of the two points where the Moon's path crosses the Sun's. That is the whole of it.

There is nothing mystical in the mechanism, and you can check the dates against any almanac.

What makes them worth a report is that they arrive in a rhythm rather than at random. The crossing points move slowly backwards through the zodiac, taking about eighteen months to shift, so eclipses come in a run of two or three across the same pair of opposite signs, then move on. That means the same area of your life gets worked on repeatedly for a year and a half, and then stops.

Astrologically an eclipse behaves like a lunation with the volume up. A New Moon eclipse starts something; a Full Moon eclipse finishes something. The extra weight tends to show up as an outside event rather than a decision — news arrives, somebody else moves, a situation resolves without you having engineered it.

That is genuinely the useful part, and it is much smaller than what you will have read elsewhere.

How To Read The List

Below is every eclipse in the next three years, with the house of your chart it falls in and any contact it makes to your birth positions.

The house is the part that always applies. Every eclipse lands somewhere in every chart, and the house tells you which area of life is being worked on. That is the spine of this report and it is worth reading even where nothing else is marked.

A direct contact is rarer and it is the one to diary. Most eclipses touch nothing in a given chart; when one lands within a few degrees of a birth position, that is the one people tend to remember afterwards. If a date below has a contact listed, put it in the calendar with a fortnight either side.

Timing is approximate on purpose. An eclipse is felt across roughly a month, sometimes with the actual event arriving days before the date rather than after it. The dates are given in Universal Time, the clock astronomers keep, so where you live an eclipse can fall on the day before or the day after the one listed. Anybody offering you an eclipse to the hour is selling precision that does not exist.

18 July 2027 is an eclipse on paper only: the Moon barely touches the Earth's outer shadow and there is nothing to see. Read it as a strong Full Moon on your Sun, a quieter cousin of the lunar eclipses around it.

Solar Eclipses — Beginnings

A solar eclipse is a New Moon, so it belongs to the starting half of the cycle.

The Moon passes directly between the earth and the Sun and blocks it briefly. Astrologically that reads as a reset: something in the affected area of life is cleared and started again, and what begins here tends to be still running six months later.

What people report most consistently is that solar eclipses arrive with information. A conversation, an offer, a piece of news that changes the picture. It is less often a decision you make and more often a situation that develops and requires one.

The practical note is that whatever starts around a solar eclipse is worth taking seriously even when it looks small. The scale of the beginning is a poor guide to where it goes.

Lunar Eclipses — Completions

A lunar eclipse is a Full Moon, so it belongs to the finishing half of the cycle.

The earth passes between the Sun and the Moon and throws its shadow across it. What that corresponds to is culmination: something reaches its conclusion, becomes visible, or is finally understood.

These are the ones with the ominous reputation, and it is only half deserved. A lunar eclipse does correspond to endings, and endings include finishing a course, completing a project, and finding out where you stand. The distress attached to them in popular astrology says more about how people feel about conclusions than about the technique.

The useful note is that lunar eclipses tend to show you something rather than change something. What arrives is usually information you already half had, in a form that can no longer be ignored.

Penumbral Eclipses — The Quiet Ones

A penumbral eclipse falls at a Full Moon as well, so it sits on the closing side of the cycle with the other lunar eclipses.

The difference is in the shadow. The earth throws two, a dark inner one and a pale outer one around it, and on a penumbral eclipse the Moon passes through the outer shadow only. The dimming is slight, a faint greying along one edge, and on some of them there is nothing to see at all. When it is one of those, it is an eclipse on paper and an ordinary Full Moon to anyone who happens to look up.

It is listed here because an almanac lists it, and a count of your eclipses that left it out would be wrong. It is read the way a lunar eclipse is, as something reaching its end or coming into view, only more quietly: a small finish, a detail settled, a fact that surfaces without much ceremony.

The Areas Being Worked On

❖ Eclipses in Your 12th House — The Private Half

3 eclipses here: 12 August 2026, 2 August 2027, 22 July 2028

Eclipses here work on what is not visible — rest, retreat, the inner life, and whatever you have been carrying without mentioning.

This is the quietest house for eclipses and often the most significant in retrospect. Events are internal or hidden: something is understood, something is released, a pattern that has run for years is finally seen. Frequently nothing happens externally at all until the following year.

In practice: often nothing visible at all. A realisation, an ending nobody else knew about, a period of illness or retreat, the moment a long pattern is finally recognised for what it is. The characteristic report from this house is that the significance only became obvious a year later, which is why it is the easiest one to dismiss while it is happening.

❖ Eclipses in Your 5th House — Creativity, Children, Pleasure

3 eclipses here: 6 July 2028, 14 January 2029, 26 June 2029

Eclipses here work on what you make and what you enjoy — creative work, romance, children, the parts of life that exist because you wanted them rather than needed them.

This house produces the most welcome eclipse events on average. Something you make gets seen, a relationship starts or resolves, a child arrives or reaches a turning point. It is also where people rediscover an abandoned interest.

In practice: a pregnancy or a child's turning point, a creative thing finished and shown, a romance beginning or ending, a hobby that stops being a hobby. It is the friendliest of the houses for eclipses on average, and the one people most often describe afterwards as the period their life got more enjoyable rather than more organised.

❖ Eclipses in Your 7th House — Partnership And The Other Person

2 eclipses here: 28 August 2026, 17 August 2027

Eclipses here work on one-to-one relationships — marriage, business partners, the person opposite you in whatever the current arrangement is.

This is the house where eclipse events most often arrive through somebody else's decision. Someone commits, someone leaves, someone appears. The characteristic experience is of responding rather than initiating, which is uncomfortable and is the nature of the house.

In practice: a proposal, a separation, a business partner arriving or departing, a legal matter concluding. The characteristic experience is that somebody else moves first, which is disorienting for people used to deciding. Where a relationship has been undecided for a long time, eclipses across this axis tend to end the undecidedness one way or another.

❖ Eclipses in Your 6th House — Work, Routine, Health

2 eclipses here: 6 February 2027, 26 January 2028

Eclipses here work on the daily machinery — the job rather than the career, the routine, the body, and anything you are responsible for maintaining.

Changes tend to be practical and unglamorous: a role changes, a habit breaks or forms, a health matter finally gets attended to. Unglamorous is not the same as unimportant, and this house quietly decides how the rest of the chart feels day to day.

In practice: a job change that is not a career change, a diagnosis or a recovery, an exercise habit that finally holds, a colleague leaving, a pet. Small events, and they compound. This house decides what your Tuesdays are like, and eclipses here are the ones people underestimate at the time and credit afterwards.

❖ Eclipses in Your 11th House — Friends, Groups, What You Are Aiming At

2 eclipses here: 12 January 2028, 31 December 2028

Eclipses here work on your wider circle and your longer hopes — friendships, communities, the organisations you belong to, and what you are ultimately working toward.

Friendship groups reorganise under these. People leave, a new circle forms, or you discover which of them was actually a friend. It is also the house where a long-held goal gets either revived or quietly dropped.

In practice: a friendship group dissolving or forming, an organisation joined or left, a long-held ambition either revived or finally abandoned. Friendships are the specific casualty and the specific gift here. People commonly look back and find that the circle they had before an eclipse run is not the circle they had after it.

❖ Eclipses in Your 1st House — Yourself And How You Appear

1 eclipse here: 20 February 2027

Eclipses here work on you directly — appearance, health, the version of yourself you present. Reinventions cluster in this period: people change how they look, what they answer when asked what they do, or simply how much room they take up.

What tends to arrive is a prompt from outside that makes the current version untenable. It is uncomfortable and it is usually followed by people saying you seem different.

In practice: people cut or change their hair, leave a job and describe themselves differently at parties, lose or gain a noticeable amount of weight, or finally drop a label they had outgrown years earlier. It looks cosmetic from outside and is rarely cosmetic underneath. If two of these arrive in the same eighteen months, expect to be meaningfully different at the end of it, and expect old friends to comment.

❖ Eclipses in Your 10th House — Career And Standing

1 eclipse here: 12 June 2029

Eclipses here work on your public position — job, reputation, what you are known for, and the authority figures who have a say in it.

This is the most visible of the houses for eclipse events. Promotions, exits, and changes of direction cluster here, and they are usually noticed by everyone who knows you. It is also where a long-running dissatisfaction finally becomes actionable.

In practice: a promotion, a resignation, a redundancy, a public credit, a boss replaced. This is the most externally visible house for eclipse events and the one where a change is hardest to keep quiet. If your work situation has been unsatisfactory for a while, eclipses here are where the situation stops waiting for you to decide.

The Ones To Diary

These are the eclipses that land within a few degrees of something in your birth chart. They are the rarer half of this report and the half people tend to remember afterwards.

❖ Eclipse on Your Ascendant — 12 August 2026 (solar, 4.0°)

This lands on how you meet the world. Contacts here correspond to a change in how you are seen, and often in how you look or present yourself. It is one of the most reliably noticeable eclipse contacts, and people around you will comment before you have decided anything.

Around this date, be deliberate about how you present yourself, because people will be forming or revising an impression. It is an unusually good window for a photograph, an introduction or a first meeting that matters.

❖ Eclipse on Your Moon — 28 August 2026 (lunar, 0.6°)

This lands on your emotional life and your sense of home. Contacts here tend to arrive through family, living arrangements or somebody you depend on, and they are felt before they are understood. Expect a stretch of being more affected by things than usual, and do not make large decisions in the middle of it.

Around this date, protect sleep and food, and let somebody know you are having a strange few weeks. Contacts here are felt physically as much as emotionally, and the thing that helps most is the ordinary support you are least likely to ask for.

❖ Eclipse on Your Venus — 28 August 2026 (lunar, 3.8°)

This lands on your relationships and what you value. Contacts here correspond to something clarifying about affection or money — a relationship moves to a different footing, or you discover what something is actually worth to you. It is rarely violent and it is frequently decisive.

Around this date, notice what you agree to. Contacts here soften judgement about money and affection in the same direction, and the characteristic regret is a generous decision made quickly that looks different in a month.

❖ Eclipse on Your Saturn — 6 February 2027 (solar, 4.6°); 17 August 2027 (penumbral lunar, 2.0°)

This lands on the load-bearing structure. Contacts here correspond to a responsibility arriving or ending, and to arrangements that have held for years being tested. It is heavy and it tends to be constructive: what survives this contact is usually worth keeping.

Around this date, expect the responsible option to be the one that works. This is not a contact that rewards improvisation. Whatever you take on here you will still be carrying in two years, so agree to it deliberately.

❖ Eclipse on Your Mars — 26 January 2028 (solar, 2.4°)

This lands on your drive. Something you have been pushing at either breaks open or has to be abandoned, and the energy behind it goes somewhere else. Contacts here often coincide with a fight, a departure, or a sudden willingness to act on something long postponed.

Around this date, do the physical thing rather than the confrontational one. The energy is real and it will find an outlet; a hard week of work or exercise is a considerably better destination for it than an argument you cannot take back.

❖ Eclipse on Your North Node — 31 December 2028 (lunar, 0.6°)

This lands on your own nodal axis, which is where the eclipses live. A contact here is unusually significant: it corresponds to a period where the direction of your life is genuinely in play. These are rare, they cluster, and they are worth diarising properly.

Around this date, say yes to the thing that is slightly beyond you. This is the rarest contact in the report and it marks a genuine fork; the version of this period people regret is almost always the one where they stayed put.

❖ Eclipse on Your Sun — 14 January 2029 (solar, 2.1°)

This one lands on your core self. Eclipses to the Sun correspond to a change in identity or direction that is visible to everybody — the version of you that walks into a room is not quite the one that walked out. It is among the strongest contacts an eclipse can make, and it is the one people most often date a new chapter from afterwards.

Around this date, do not start anything you would find hard to reverse in the fortnight either side. Not because it is dangerous, but because your own sense of what you want is genuinely in motion, and a decision made mid-shift tends to be made twice.

❖ Eclipse on Your Mercury — 26 June 2029 (lunar, 0.1°)

This lands on how you think and communicate. The characteristic event is a conversation, a document or a message that rearranges what you thought was settled. It is one of the lighter contacts and one of the most useful, because what arrives is usually information you can act on rather than a situation you must absorb.

Around this date, write things down and confirm arrangements. Whatever arrives here arrives as information, and the practical risk is not that it is bad news but that it is misremembered or half-heard.

What Eclipses Do Not Do

This is the part of astrology most oversold, so it is worth being blunt.

Most eclipses do nothing dramatic to most people. There are four to six a year, every year, and if each one brought a life-changing event nobody would have an ordinary decade. The honest expectation is that one or two in a three-year run are memorable and the rest pass unremarked.

They do not make things end. The popular version of eclipses is relentlessly ominous, and it is not supported by the technique. A Full Moon eclipse corresponds to completion, which is as often a graduation as a loss.

They are not a reason to postpone your life. The advice to avoid decisions around eclipses is one of the more expensive superstitions in circulation — people delay launches, conversations and offers for weeks on the strength of it. If something is right and it lands on an eclipse, do it.

And nothing here can tell you what will happen. It can tell you which room of your life the light is being pointed at, which is a real thing to know and considerably less than a prediction.

Using The Next Eighteen Months

The pattern is more useful than any single date.

Look at which houses the eclipses cluster in. That axis is the part of your life due for rearrangement over the next year and a half, and it is a better planning input than any individual eclipse. If they are falling across your home and career houses, that is a period where the balance between those two gets renegotiated, and knowing it in advance is worth something.

Then watch what actually arrives. Eclipses are the easiest astrological event to check, because the dates are fixed and public and you can simply note what happened within a fortnight either side.

Do that for one eighteen-month run and you will have your own evidence about whether this technique works for you, which is worth more than anything anybody else tells you about eclipses, including this report.

And when the run moves on to a new pair of signs, the pressure on that area genuinely lifts. That is the reassuring half of the rhythm and almost nobody mentions it.
